

YOU ARE INVITED

With more than 90% of information managed by governmental agencies having a geospatial component, Geographic Information Systems (GIS) has become a critical mapping and decision making tool for both public and private agencies across the state of Oklahoma.

On March 14, over 30 private, tribal, federal, state and local agencies will be showcasing how they use GIS technology in their day to day operations. Please make plans to join us for this once a year opportunity to visit with the many GIS professionals in Oklahoma as they illustrate some of the work they do using GIS as a tool to efficiently and accurately manage information they deal with on a daily basis.
